Opportunity is awaiting you in the Women's Army Corps. Look over this list. Check the one you can do best. By performing one of these vital tasks, you will release a soldier for front line duty. You and two other women can actually put a bomber in the air by relieving a radio operator, a mechanic, and a gunsight repairman. If three women can do this, imagine what 150,000 women can do! They will release a whole Army of men — an Army the size of General Montgomery's Eighth Army which swept the Germans out of Libya — an Army greater in number than our pre-war Regular Army.

Each of these duties is vital to victory . . . each carries with it real responsibility. If you are a radio operator, you may send the message which decides the outcome of a battle. If you are a bombsight repairer, your accuracy may bring about a direct hit on an enemy base. You may pack the parachute which a pilot will

You will be trained by expert teachers for each of these duties. You may become an expert in your field.
After the war, you will be able to use the experience gained from the Women's Army Corps in dozens of professions and occupations.

Today, it is a woman's right to take her place in the fight for freedom. The Women's Army Corps offers 150,000 women the opportunity to do something important and exciting in the war. Take your opportunity today. When you enroll, you not only relieve a man for front line duty — you enroll for victory.
